

Grace E. Dailey
Senior Deputy Comptroller for Bank Supervision Policy and Chief National Bank Examiner

Grace E. Dailey is the Senior Deputy Comptroller for Bank Supervision Policy and Chief National Bank Examiner at the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC).

In this role, Ms. Dailey directs the formulation of policies and procedures for the supervision and examination of national banks and federal savings associations, chairs the agency's Committee on Bank Supervision, and serves on the OCC's Executive Committee. She assumed this role in May 2016.

Ms. Dailey previously served as Deputy Comptroller for Large Bank Supervision overseeing a portfolio of the nation's largest banks. She has also served as Examiner-in-Charge for Citibank and U.S. Bank and as Assistant Deputy Comptroller for Midsize and Community Bank Supervision. She has supervised banks of all sizes from OCC offices in Minneapolis, Chicago, and New York. She was designated a Senior National Bank Examiner, the highest honor available to national bank examiners. Ms. Dailey also played an important role in the agency's implementation of recommendations from its international supervision peer review recommendations as head of the Process Improvement Working Group.

Ms. Dailey joined the OCC in 1983 as Assistant National Bank Examiner in Minneapolis after graduating from the University of Wisconsin--Eau Claire, in 1982. She earned a Chartered Financial Analyst designation.
